

Dear Sirs,

I refer to your email dated 30th Apr 2014, please find the following – my personal opinion of establishing a unified Information and Communications Technology (ICT) professional recognition framework in Hong Kong.

Being an IT practitioner and professional for more than 30 years, I am fully support of having a unified ICT professional recognition framework in Hong Kong that will be at the beneficials to IT Professionals, Employers and Hong Kong Community.

Similar to other professional like medical doctor, lawyer, accountant and engineer, attaining such professional certification will assure standards, expertise, capabilities and quality among IT professionals.

Employers would be easier to assess and recruit appropriate candidates who could properly perform their roles and responsibilities and growth with the companies.

Finally, this certification programme would help Hong Kong maintaining and enhancing its regional and global competitiveness through fostering developments in IT professionalism in Hong Kong.

I sincerely wish that a commonly recognized IT professional certification programme will be implemented in Hong Kong as soon as possible so that IT practitioners, employers and Hong Kong will all be beneficial.

Yours sincerely,

Alvin CS Tsang
